NEW FEATURE: EQUIPMENT REVIEW

This month we begin a new feature, courtesy of Hunt's Photo and Video. We're looking forward to reading about various accessories as much as about cameras. The first review is on the Memory Kick Media Center.

Memory Kick

Jonathan Lawton

As a photographer who loves to travel and shoot on location, I constantly have my eye out for products that can simplify my life, and at the same time, lighten up my camera bag. For the past few weeks I've had the chance to preview the Memory Kick MediaCenter that can do just that.

The MediaCenter is a portable media storage and viewing device. The hard-drive based device is roughly the size of deck of cards and features a 2.2 inch LCD screen that allows you to immediately view your uploaded photo and video files. I found the biggest advantage of the MediaCenter to be its compact size, which allowed me to back up my photos without carrying around a laptop while out in the field.

It was easy to upload my photos into the MediaCenter because it supports a host of memory card types including Compact Flash, Secure Digital, Memory Stick, and XD. The device serves as a conduit for media transfer between separate memory cards and allows you to easily share files with others. A recent firmware upgrade allows the MediaCenter to support the viewing of RAW image format from most digital SLR cameras.

The MediaCenter I previewed had 60GB of memory space to store photographs, videos, and even music. The MediaCenter stores and plays music similar to most consumer MP3 players. The Memory Kick MediaCenter comes in three different hard-drive capacities (30GB, 60GB, and 120GB) and six different colors. (Red, Black, Blue, Silver, Wasabi, Copper)
